"Miss McIvor, of savannah." The game of a man dressing up in woman's rig and playing the effusive maiden upon another eredulous chap is rather an old one buthere was a case of it at one of the fashionable receptions in this city last week, which, for mastodon conception, morumental check and general immensity, leaves all the others for behind. Young B- was from Virginia, and Was on a visit to his cousin, who boards on Charles street. B--'s cousin was widely known as a "young man about towo," and knew all the "boye," was a favorite am rog the girle, and consequently invited out a great deal, and universally dubbed a good fellow. Receiving invitations for the swell affairs which came off last week, as might have been even by the daily papers, he set himself to obtain invitations for B-, the young cousin from Virgin ia. B --- was about 19 years of age, with a beardiess face and singularly beautiful complexion. Besides, he had large blue eyes and a rather all mouth. Aithough, he was the sort of m .o upon whom one would remark cas ually that he would have made a better looking weman than man. The idea suddenly seized upon the cousio that it would be a jully game to dress B- up as a girl, take the nostess iato his confidence, and play a aptop game on the boys at the same time. The cousin grap pled the thought with so much eagersens that he sliced off a good sized piece of ou ic'e with the razor which he was shaving himself at the time, and he forenwith communicated the plan to B- was also tackled kindly to it. I'he cousin then went off, and, taking an incimate young lady friend into his confidence, borrowed tull ball to m rig -from artificial flowers clear down to red saila gatters. It was gorgetus. The night for the big reception came around, and B- donned the costume and hired a theatrical blonde wig, Theo, with the aid of a couple of panniers and a little raw cotton he "made up" charmingly. He really looked | ke a stunningly handsome woman, and after practicing a few suppers and some passes with his train, noder the delighted and esthused mision of his cousin, he was charged and primed, ready to go off. They bired a hick and weat off-together-to the reception. Arriving there, the hostess-who had assented rather unwillingly, it must be admitted, to the hoax-met them at the door and received them graciously. She was ascounded when she first laid her optics on B-, and would not believe at first that he was a man, She regarded him ou iously for the remainder of the evening. They had arranged that B-was to be called "Miss Melvor, from Savanuah," and accordingly "Miss McIvor" was carried areu d and introduced promisen usly; and, being an accomplished dancer, even dasced in a figure of the german with a young min. Feeling rather awakward and necession table during the early part of the evening, however, "Miss Mclor" remained with her cousin much of the time, and with him visited a certain buffet so regularly that, under the mellowing infla nees of Amoutiliade, &c., &c., she tell in for anything, and resolved to situa on a little style and osprivate one or two of the jeunes hommes who floated around. There was one particularly good tocking young man-whe, by the way, is well known on 'Change-whom Miss Mely r resolved to ensuare fi st. Sue ob tained an in raduction through the medium of her cousio, who ad led. sitta voc., to af resaid good looking young man, "She's up to a thing or two, my boy; go in for some fun." Inc. The good lock og young man, whom it were best to call Pyramus for short, took the sotto voce advice and went in for a fi reation. "Miss Mo-Ivor" played him like a fish, and led him like a lamb to the mint sauce. They danced a figure, and Miss Melvor thought it was so warm; couldn't they go into the conservatory and cool off? Pyramus said ha, ha way down in the depths of his disphragm, and they went to the now offer for sale: conservatory. They sai down in a cetired no. k! Perry's Complete Wheat Fertilizer.

under the shelt r of a large groupe of potted ferns, and there they staid for a long time. Then it is alleged that Pyramus made the most desperate love to Miss Mclvor, and Miss Mclvor responded to his tereid uttersuces with words of shy but not torbidding remonstrance, and fically gave way and allowed Lim to put his arm ar und her weist, and even to kiss her, which would have been an exceedingly reprehensible proceeding had not Miss Mclvor been -, but no macter, they had a royal old flirtstion, and after the dashing young belle had gotten all the fun she could out of Pyramus, she led him gently back and set her me s to carch other fish. Five blessed lambs in swallow tail and white tie did she lead to that hellowed seat in the conservatory, one after the other. She pursued the same tactics and got all the business of the role of "beautiful and fast young lady" down fine. They all old ex oils the same thing. Who would not have done so u der the circumstances, at much less provocation than what was, apparently, a handsome young lidy fascinatingly "up to scuff?" Of charse, each of the "tin gods on wheels" sho were "taken in,"

came out and confidentally but raptaquely told his intimate friends about the dashing young damsal. In this way it was whispered about, and "Miss Mclv r" became the centre of a 3 Button Party Color Kid Gloves large circle, and proved an irresistible magnet to the men and an object of supercilious looks and sniffs of the real young belles, who were very bitter against the young lady who drew the men away from them. In short, the young damsel fairly laid waste the male portion of that assemblage and had them running after her and suing for "the next waltz" or "a little stroll" by the some. Never waitz or a little stroll' by the cole. Never did real, bona fide belle achieve a more brilliant success than did this young raical under the guise of "Miss McIvor, from bayannah;" and when Miss McIvor lai off hor togs that night and once more assumed the personnel of B—, from Virginia, he and his cousin rolled on the floor in convumions of delight and then sat until broad daylight wagging their heads and poking each other in the ribs, or bursting with volcanic explosions of merriment as B—recounted his droll adventures. The story leaked out, of course, It siways does; and young B—actually had to flee the town to escape the vengeance which his enraged dupes vowed to wreak ipon him. And these same dupes are about the sickest men in t wn just now. If anyone wants a quarrel, let him go u) to one of them in the street, button hole him and say: "Ih by the way, o' man, did you ment that blamed handsome blonde at the --- s the other night? Her name was -hum, ba-; set me set-; oh! Miss Mcivor." That settles it, Fact.—Baltimore
